

Coffee with Creators

I went to coffee with creators this morning (October 24). That was a lot of fun. I was really nervous when I first got there, but the people there were super friendly. I was really impressed with The Factory as a work space. I talked with a couple of people who were more on the coding side of things. They said it was a shame there weren't more artists and designers there this morning. We talked a bit about Creative Expo, VR, and the Raspberry Pi Zero. I've been looking for an affordable office space in downtown, so it's a space I think I can take advantage of. I plan on going back.